

CALLS IT ALL PIFFLE

G. Bronson-Howard Ignores Being Termed Cad.

DENIES WIFE'S ALLEGATIONS

Magazine Writer Declares Himself "Decent Sort of Chap"—Says He Is Not Afraid of Any One in Matter, and Does Not Need Publicity—Fine Actress and Beautiful Woman.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Baltimore, June 17.—Mr. Howard, your wife says you are a coward and a cad. What about it?

George Fitzalan Bronson-Howard, author and magazine writer, flanked the ashes from a cigarette in his apartment at the Talbot, 37 East North avenue, and replied:

"That's a matter of opinion—merely a matter of opinion."

"And the New York newspapers said that when you landed from London you were afraid of being thrashed by her father, Mr. Skinner, of Norfolk."

"I'm not afraid of any one in this matter," said Mr. Howard, "and as for the story of Mr. Skinner meeting me at the pier, that was invented by New York newspaper men. I heard it for the first time from a Herald reporter, who threw it out to draw me on, evidently. If Mr. Skinner had been there, I would have given him a long heart-to-heart talk, and would have advised him to go to London and see his daughter."

"And it is the general talk that you gave out the story of your disagreement with your wife for publicity purposes, in anticipation of writing a novel on it; in fact, your wife is quoted as saying that you would doubtless write a thriller on 'The Interrupted Honeymoon.'"

Does Not Need Publicity.

"It is all piffle," said Mr. Howard. "As to wanting publicity for my literary purposes, I don't need any. I am now $5,000 words behind contract with my publishers, and have all I can do ahead of me to catch up."

"And she said, according to the papers, that you were very skippy about giving her money."

"Also piffle—all piffle and not. I spent about $2,500 with this little experience, and I've got enough. I did refuse to pay a lot of unreasonable bills, but I offered to send her back to Norfolk when she chose Miss Schenck in preference to me. She refused the offer, and that's all there is to it."

"And she says, according to the New York reports, that you kept a pistol on the bookcase and threatened to kill her."

"That is piffle. I did keep a pistol on the bookcase—a revolving bookcase—but I never used it or threatened to use it, and I certainly never threatened her life."

"And she says you called her 'woman,' and then 'thing.'"

Not Responsible When Mad.

"I can't be responsible for anything I might have said in anger," he replied. "I may have, and probably have, something of a temper under conditions, and I may have lost my temper. If I said anything harsh to her I don't remember it. In any event, I can't be held responsible for what I say when I am mad."

"And she says you had cards printed bearing a stage name for her, and wanted her to go on the stage to help pay expenses."

"Now, dash it all, man, how is a fellow going to keep her from saying anything she wants to say? She had some cards printed, but I didn't. I never made such a proposition. I never had any cards printed. I never encouraged such a thing."

"And you are quoted in the New York papers as saying you rescued her from the fire at the home of James F. Shaffer, which she denied."

"Now, there it goes again. I can't be responsible for what newspaper writers quote me as saying. I never said I rescued her. I never said it here, nor in New York. As a matter of fact, I wasn't even in the house."

May Go on Stage.

"Is your wife going on the stage?"

"I imagine she will. She is a fine actress and a beautiful woman."

"She says here that you have one redeeming trait—that you are kind to your brother and sister."

"She does me justice," said Mr. Howard.

The foregoing is a pretty complete statement of the case on both sides of the complicated, or to be complicated, romance of George Fitzalan Bronson-Howard, of Baltimore, and Miss Daisy Skinner, of Norfolk, who met at Albany's Theater in February, courted two weeks, were married in New York, sailed for Europe, returned, parted, and returned to the United States. Mr. Howard will not sue for divorce, he says, unless she claims alimony, in which case he will defend himself by a suit counter to the one which she expects her to bring soon.

AGAINST LITERARY MEN.

Mrs. Howard Talks Freely About Her Troubles.

New York, June 17.—"My advice to a girl who intends to get married is not to marry a man with literary tastes and temperament," said the fascinating Mrs. George F. Bronson-Howard to-day in the parlors of the Hotel Gallatin.

Mrs. Howard is young, vivacious, and beautiful, and she is on her way back to her home in Norfolk, Va., after a runaway match with the young author which terminated disastrously in London three weeks ago. When she arrives home she will begin immediately to sue Howard for divorce.

"I never want to see him again," said she.

"The idea," cautioned Mrs. Howard, "for him to say that he left me. Why, I rather think I left him. He came home in the middle of the night terribly under the influence of liquor, and I just laid to go. It was the last straw. Then he started up and cried, 'I am a gentleman. I never go to bed without fixing my face.' Then he washed he had a preparation of the deodorant. You can imagine that I was tickled to death over the incident."

Mrs. Howard says she does not intend to go on the stage, but that she is going back to her father and mother, and get a divorce as quietly as she can.

CURRICULUM TO BE IMPROVED

Special Board Will Suggest Changes at Naval Academy.

President Considers Present Course Too Theoretical and Desires It Made More Practical.

A special board consisting of Capt. Richard Walnwright, Commander Robert S. Griffin, Albert S. Key, and Lieut. T. L. Johnson, recorder, has been designated by the Navy Department, and is now at work upon a plan to improve the curriculum at the Annapolis Naval Academy.

The board has held several meetings in Annapolis and is now in session in Washington. The board has been given no specific instructions, but its purpose is to make recommendations of such modifications as may be found advisable in the four years' course of midshipmen. It is understood that the President regards the present course as too theoretical, and holds that it should be made more practical.

The board has never been revised since the foundation of the Academy, but as at present constituted is a development intended to keep pace with the development of the modern navy. In some respects, however, it is believed by many naval men that improvements can be made. It is understood that Rear Admiral Brownson, now chief of the Bureau of Navigation, shares this opinion.

The board is at present engaged in examining the courses at various technical schools, such as the Boston School of Technology, the Try Institute, the technical schools at Leigh, Harvard, Yale, and at several other similar institutions. It is pointed out that many midshipmen are capable of making good sailors, but are unable to come up to the desired standard in the theoretical branches, and it is to overcome the situation in this respect that the board will direct its efforts.

At the same time it is held that the standard must be fixed with mathematics as the basis for the reason that seamanship is not an exact science. The board is required to submit its report not later than August 1.

NEW LINE TO PITTSBURG.

Goulds to Extend West Virginia Connecting Railroad.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Cumberland, Md., June 17.—It is reported that the Gould executives have closed a deal for surveys and right-of-way of the West Virginia Connecting Railroad, a proposed line from Belington, W. Va., on the Western Maryland to Rogersville, near Waynesburg, Pa., where connection is to be made with the proposed Unifont-Wheeling Short Line. The report of the deal comes from Gould headquarters.

It is officially announced that the West Virginia Connecting Railroad will not end at Rogersville, as surveys have been completed, and a connection will then be made with the Wash-Pittsburgh terminal, giving the new line a direct entrance into Pittsburgh. This project, if carried out, will open up some 600 acres of coal land in Harrison County, W. Va. It is generally accepted that the Gould interests have decided to postpone indefinitely work on the projected route between Cumberland, Pittsburgh, and Wheeling.

NEWS OF ALEXANDRIA

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU.

(Bell Telephone 113)
Corner of Prince and Royal Streets.
Alexandria, Va., June 17.—With the election by the electoral board of the judges who are to serve in the several voting precincts of this city, arrangements have been completed for the part of the Democratic primary to be held next Wednesday for the nomination of a candidate for Congress from the Eighth Virginia district. The following officials were announced this evening: First ward—Wayne F. Byers, Oscar Phillips, and W. B. Doble. Second ward—Conrad Schwab, R. M. Latham, and Robert W. Arnold. Third ward—E. J. In addition to the election officials, one personal representative of each candidate is permitted to be present at each of the voting places to look after the interest of his principal. It is assumed that Judge Charles E. Nicol and Charles C. Carlin will avail themselves of this privilege, and it is probable that Mr. Gordon and Mr. Ryan will also be represented.

It is conceded by local politicians that the fight in this city will be between Mr. Carlin and Judge Nicol, and that the former will receive a large majority of the votes cast here. Judge Nicol's friends expect that he will receive a good-sized vote in this city.

The voting will take place at the usual places. In the First ward the polls will be located at the Elkins, in the Second ward at the City Hall, in the Third ward at Old Fellows' Hall, and in the Fourth ward at the Friendship engine house.

The American Institute of Homeopathy convened at the inside Inn of the exposition grounds to-day, with several hundred homeopathic doctors from all parts of the country attending. The convention will be in session for several days.

RYAN DENIES RUMORS.

Candidate for Virginia Congressional Nomination Will Not Withdraw.

John F. Ryan, of Loudoun County, one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Eighth district, last night emphatically denied that he has any intention of retiring from the contest. The rumor was started yesterday afternoon and Mr. Ryan immediately bustled himself in sending strenuous denials to his constituents.

Mr. Ryan said that this was the second time such rumors had been started, the first time when he was at his home, sick in bed, and now on the eve of the primary election, which takes place to-morrow. Mr. Ryan said that he feels fair-minded people of his district will understand the motives of the originators of these rumors and that they will not be influenced by them. He says that he feels he has an equal chance with every candidate in the field, and that if his friends stand by him, as he has every reason to believe according to their assurances, he will succeed in wresting the honors from all his competitors.

IDENTIFIED AS M. F. WOOD.

Body of Drowned Man Taken to Charlottesville, Va.

The body found in the river Sunday afternoon was yesterday identified as that of M. F. Wood, who lives twenty miles from Charlottesville, Va. Identification was brought about by Capt. Bowman and the chief of police of the Virginia city. Wood came to Washington several days ago, and since that time had been looking for work. It is believed that he was depressed by the death of his wife, who died of a man answering to Wood's description called at the Arsenal last week and wanted to enlist in the service of the government.
